She turned round again, and said quietly, 'Yes, Ned, I should like to try what I can do; I think you said these are reports of his trial. I'll begin by reading them.' She read them both very slowly and carefully, and her face grew like a judge's, and Helen watched each shade of expression with deep anxiety.

That powerful countenance showed alacrity and hope at first, then doubt, and difficulty, and at last dejection. Helen's heart turned cold, and for the first time she began to despair. Mrs. Undercliff, having read the reports, avoided Helen's eye (another bad sign.) Q.—Can you tell me how the word Santa Claus originated? I have looked in Webster and several Encyclopredias, and find nothing in regard to it. Give me what information you can,

Does it not mean native Americans (north and south) of European descent?

A.—The word is very generally misused. A "creole," properly speaking, is one born in the country but not a native of it. It is correctly applied, however, to persons born in Louisiana and of pure European blood, as distinguished from immigrant Europeans and the offspring of mixed blood. Brazilian creoles call themselves Brasileiros. quitted on that count. Q.—"Did you ever hear of the 'Bidden-der-Maids?' Who were they and what? I think Biddenden is a small village in England."

A.—The Biddenden-Maids were some thing like the present Siamese Twins. They were two unmarried sisters named Mary and Elizabeth Chulkhurst, born at Biddenden, in 1100, and joined together, as tradition states, by the shoulders and hips. They lived for thirty-four years, when the one died, and the other, persisting in a refusal to be separated from the corpse of her sister, succumbed six hours after. The judges know this, and the pains and labor I take to be right, and they treat me with couriesy. At Penfold's trial the matter was easy; I showed the court he had not written the note, and my evidence crushed the indictment so far. How could they have laughed at my testimony? Why, they acted upon it. Those reports are not worth a straw. What journals were they cut out of?" 'I don't know,' said Helen.

While afloat he saw much active service said he aggravated his offence by trying to cast a slur upon the Wardiaws.
I'll swear the judge never said a syllable of the kind. What he said was him; but, on looking more closely, she found that he was examining, not the reports, but the sadvertisements and miscellanea on the reverse side.

She waited out of politeness, but she colored and bit her lip. She could not help feeling hurt and indignant. 'Any trash is more interesting to people than poor Robert's case, 'she thought. Q.—What is the Complexion?—Does it consist of the color of the skin, or of the hair and eyebrows? We constantly hear persons spoken of as being dark-ompetioned, who have dark hair and eyebrows, but a very pale face; and others, who have a dark face, always sunburnt with little exposure, but not light hair, who are called light-com-

'If you please,' said the Expert, over whose head, bent in dogged scrutiny, his small thunderbolt of feminine wrath passed unconscious.

Helen drove away to Peele's Coffee House.

Mrs. Undersiff pondered over the grant with little exposure, but not reference in the substrate who are called light-complexioned.

A.—The word complexion, in its application to personal appearance, has reference more particularly to the color of the skin, so that a person may have dark hair and eyes and yet be properly called light complexioned.

lation of the Eastern cities and States generally, to emigrate to the West, has alreadyplaced many not only in comfortable but in independent circumstances, and has also made fortunes for not a few. But while Missouri, Kansas, and other portions of the Far West hold out strong inducements to emigrants, there is a State much nearer home whose advantages are informer to no State in the tages are inferior to no State in the Union, which has been singularly overlooked. I mean West Virginia. The area of this State is about 23,000 square miles and the population at the last census was a little less than 400,000—it must now exceed half a million. The Ohio River washes the western border coal and the iron especially are of the very best quality, and in inexhaustable quantities. The best cannel coal in this country is found on the Great Ka nawha and its tributaries, in veins from four to ten feet thick. The Chesa-peake and Ohio Railroad, extending from tide water below Richmond to the mouth of the Big Sandy River, on the Kentucky line, a distance of 420 miles, runs directly across the whole State of West Virginia, and will soon be fin-ished, making the shortest and best route from all the great centers of trade in the West to tide water in the East. The owners of large tracts of land are dividing them up into farms of suitable dividing them up into farms of suitable size, and offering them for sale on terms within the reach of almost every enterprising man. Very many farms can be had with small houses and several acres cleared and under cultivation. Half the county of Putnam, one of the best counties on the Great Kanawha River, is owned by non-residents, and they are now offering their lands for sale, both coal and farming lands, in quantities to suit purchasers. Those, therefore, who are disposed to engage in coal mining or farming on a large or small scale, in fruit or grape nish? I think my advances are received favorably by her.

A.—We incline to think that it would be more advantageous to you than to the lady. If her parents are willing, however, and the lady ditto, we can see no valid objection to your suit.

Q.—Decide the pranagative.

I am certain that a large majority of our people are in favor of the Legisla-ture accepting that proposition, and hope the good sense of the Senate will adopt such a course as to bring about

The rates of premium, being largely reduced, are made as favorable to the insurers as those of the best Mutual Companies, and avoid all the complications and uncertainties of Notes, Dividends and the misunderstandings which the latter are so apt to cause the Policy-Holder.

Several new and attractive tables are now presented which need only to be understood to prove acceptable to the public, such as the INCOME-PRODUCING POLICY and RETURN PREMIUM POLICY. In the former the policy-holder not only secures a life insurance, payable at death, but will receive, if living, after a period of a lew years, an annual vicome equal to ten per cent (10 per cent) of the par of his policy. In the latter the Company agrees to return to the assured the total amount of money he has paid in, in addition to the amount of his policy.

The attention of persons contemplating insuring their lives or increasing the amount of insurance they already have, is called to the special advantages offered by the National Life Insurance company.
